

MEDIA RELEASE

22nd April 2015

Partnership strengthens international expertise in health consultancy

Destravis is pleased to announce an official partnership with Canadian-based health specialists, Farrow.

Farrow and Destravis share an expertise and depth of understanding of the health sector which they apply to visioning, master planning, design and strategies for capital projects in the field.

This shared passion, combined with the similarities between the Australian and Canadian health systems, brings real opportunity to share knowledge, innovation and apply international lessons learnt to our clients projects.

“Budget is a critical factor for health service delivery in both markets. Having a partner who can think laterally to provide efficient, effective, uncompromised solutions within these constraints is especially valuable” says Gunther De Graeve, Destravis Managing Director.

De Graeve has been working directly with Tye Farrow, Managing Director of Farrow, since 2008. Each holds a Director position on the Board of the International Academy for Design & Health in Sweden and is actively involved in the advancement of design and planning in the field.

“Our clients will have access to research, outcomes and alternative solutions utilised within a similar system. This partnership brings international reach and innovation to the project process” says Farrow.

Destravis Australian-based team includes strategic visioning and capital planning specialists, facilitators and researchers, commercial asset management, health planners, facility designers and project managers who focus on best value outcomes for client and patients through their expertise and innovation in challenging and complex health projects.

More information:

Contact: Renae Whiteside, Director (Renaewhiteside@destravis.com)